LEGION MEETS TUESDAY

Membership Reaching 200 Mark.
Dances, Football Team and Bowling Main Discussions
at Next Meeting

At a meeting of the American Legion in the town hall last Tuesday night, the executive committee accepted the resignation of Arthur R. Cole of that committee and William J. Cronin was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

The Post plans many activities for the coming months and at the next meeting which is on Tuesday, September 16th, at eight o'clock, several committees will be appointed to take charge of the events.

The question of a bowling team will be discussed and the Post has already been requested to enter a bowling team in the Andover bowling league.

It has also been suggested that a football team be organized and a schedule is being arranged for the coming season.

This doubtless would be a great success as the local post has already got a number of gridiron performers and with a dependable coach Andover would be well represented along this line.

All these questions will be brought up for discussion at the next meeting and all members are urged to attend. Several new members were obtained during the week-end celebration through the united efforts of the membership committee.

Governor Coolidge and Gen. Edwards Distinguished Guests at Town's Welcome Home Celebration—Citizens Parade Has 3000 in Line—Entire Town in Community Picnic on Phillips Field

Patriotism, Friendliness and Good Cheer were the outstanding characteristics of Andover's townspeople during their unique and perfect two days' Welcome Home. Never in the history of the town has there been such a gathering of men, women and children, all happy, all eager to help each other and all proud to be citizens of this beautiful town.

Such settings as the common, with lights playing on green leaves of trees and on the faces of hundreds of interested listeners, and the variegated, ever-moving multitude on sunshiny Brothers Field, will not soon be forgotten.

The primary object of the occasion was to "Welcome Home" our men who went into service for us. The result of the whole affair was that everybody in Andover found out what a truly worthwhile town Andover really is. Where could be found committees who would work so unitedly and wholeheartedly to make their parts of the days' events successful? And the time, thought and actual manual labor put into their work by several of the men on these committees was stupendous. In what other town, for instance, could be found a gathering-place so perfectly adapted as Brothers Field. Where would be found another school that would have its force of workers devote its whole time to making ready these grounds and then clean up every bit of them?

The heavens smiled on the town and gave beautiful sunny days and warm moonlight evenings. From Friday evening until Sunday noon inclusive were spent hours of happiness and good-fellowship that will live forever in the memory of Andover's citizens.

Celebration Began on Common

To the brilliantly lighted common on Friday evening came in throngs Andover's people, big and little. On the bandstand were men of the committee who had charge of the whole affair, with Hon. John N. Cole, the chairman, presiding, and Selectmen Eames, Bowman and McTernan. Colonel Edward L. Logan, formerly of the 101st Infantry, was the distinguished guest of the evening.

Andover's service men met at R.C. O.A. hall and marched to the common, commanded by Major Bartlett H. Hayes, assisted by Lieut. William J. Cronin. Corporal Norman K. McLeish had charge of the men of the Canadian Army and Ensign Horace Hale, Smith of the Naval unit. At the common they were met by Foss' 11th Regiment, M.S.G. band, which escorted them to their place in front of the bandstand.

GOVERNOR COOLIDGE

Ringed cheers from the crowd, blowing of automobile horns, and loud clapping of hands, showed them that here was a crowd loyal and appreciative. The Red Cross nurses and the wounded of the American and Canadian armies occupied places of honor in the front rank.

Welcomed by Chairman Cole

Rev. E. Victor Bigelow of the South church offered prayer.

Chairman Cole in an address of welcome then spoke of Andover's splendid spirit which had shown itself so patriotic and so unselfish in days of war and which was again showing itself on this occasion. He said that the purpose of these few days was to bring Andover into a closer fellowship and to a sweeter spirit of kindness, one to the other, to make Andover citizens feel glad they were Andover citizens.

A letter from General Edwards was read in which he stated why it was impossible for him to be present on Friday evening, but promising, if possible, to arrive in time to address the boys at their banquet on Saturday evening. Mr. Cole said that when he had heard that General Edwards was unable to come he had thought at once of the other great leader, beloved by New England men, and that he had turned to Colonel Logan, the justice, the leader of men, and the soldier, and that he was proud and glad to introduce him to Andover.

Colonel Logan's Reception

Colonel Logan was received most enthusiastically by loud applause and much sincere cheering. Every word of his address was attentively heard by an eager and appreciative audience.

He said that Andover's large gathering manifested the love of a town for her war heroes and that that love was well deserved. Humanity, democracy and justice were the primary ideals with which we joined the Allies, and yet there was added to these another, more selfish motive. We joined them because we saw a barbaric foe sweeping over those countries across the water and we realized that if this foe were successful in its greedy, inhuman struggle, our own United States would be at stake. Our homes and our lives would be in such danger as those towns which he and our own boys had seen destroyed by cruel fires. There might not be such scenes as the one he was looking upon in this peaceful town had we not seen our boys go bravely across the water to fight for the people at home whom they loved.

Those at home, Colonel Logan said, could have no realization of what war meant. Far from the scene of conflict, the cannon's roar and the machine guns' constant booming could be heard only in imagination. But these boys of whom the town is so proud would not soon forget the horrors they had seen. Now that they are back they deserve the appreciation, love and interest of their home town.

With the coming of peace, he reminded his audience, were coming problems troublesome, onerous and costly as had been the problems of war days. He was sure, however, that the 4,800,000 men who had demonstrated their love for their country would be just as patriotic and unselfish in solving the problems of peace as they had been in solving the problems of war.

Medals Presented to Returned Men

After the address, medals were presented by the selectmen in behalf of the town of Andover to those men who had not already received them. First to receive these medals were Andover's four Red Cross nurses: Miss Lucy B. Abbott, Miss Julia B. Spinney, Miss Lillian Hulme and Mrs. Grace Woodburn Bryant. Wounded men of the American Expeditionary Forces and of the Canadian Forces came next and then all other service men who had fought with the Allies. Special badges were awarded those men who had seen overseas service.

Reception and Dance

It did not take long for that big crowd of people to disperse and soon the town hall was filled with a mass of happy dancers. It was almost impossible to wedge oneself into the hall and many went gladly to R.C.O.A. hall, to K. of C. hall and to Pilgrim hall. Even these became so thronged that it was soon necessary to open up the Andover Club rooms for dancing.

The Foss orchestra furnished music everywhere except at the K. of C. hall where Buckley's orchestra played. No better music was ever heard in the town, nor were there ever so many couples enjoying dancing at one time in the old town. For the good music which kept things lively and gay throughout the two days' celebration, the Music Committee, of which Edgar G. Holt was

PUBLIC SCHOOLS RE-OPEN

Andover Schools Opened Monday With Satisfactory Enrollment. High Schools Initial Attendance Exceeds Last Year

The Andover public schools reopened last Monday with a satisfactory attendance, but it is expected that at least one hundred more will add to the enrollment within the next week or two.

The unfavorable weather was a big factor in keeping many away on the opening day. Many of the schools show an increase over the previous year. The high school surpassed its 1918 initial enrollment by twenty pupils. The attendance is as follows:

Fire Destroys Barn

A fire caused by lightning completely destroyed the barn owned by N. E. Bartlett on Central street last Monday night.

Fred Adams of the electric light station heard the terrific crash and saw the barn burst into flames. He immediately telephoned the fire station, which responded and used three lines of hose, but the fire had gained such headway that the firemen were able to save only the coffer next to the house, which was used as a garage.

Mr. Bartlett, with the assistance of neighbors, got out his car and all the live stock, except a valuable Jersey cow. Twice they had the animal almost to safety, but it returned to the barn and was suffocated. About ten tons of hay which gave the fire such headway, and large stores of fruit and vegetables in the cellar were destroyed.

The total loss is approximated at $3500.

A fire loss of only $.069 per capita last year is the remarkable record achieved by the town of Harriman, Pa., a place of 5000 population, where one of the shipyards of the Emergency Fleet Corporation is located.

This figure, surprising compared with a per capita loss for the entire United States of about $2.76, covering both the town and the adjoining yards, represents fires, the causes of which are classified as follows:

25.4% due to carelessness
14.2% partly preventable
13.3% unknown

There were 295 fires, with the total loss for the year $1158.60.

Careful inspections were made daily throughout the plant and the town, the total for the year being 23,896, as a result of which there were 2061 orders issued for the removal of hazardous conditions.

ANDOVER'S CELEBRATION

chairman, was greatly responsible. John C. Angus, chairman of the Dance Committee, and his enthusiastic workers, were to be thanked for the success of that part of the program. Rhodes, the caterer, served many gallons of ice cream.

The town hall was artistically decorated by Farley of Lawrence, and all the halls were gay with flags and bunting. The Square was brightly lighted, and red, white and blue was in evidence on every store and building. Never was the place so full of happy people as on Friday evening. And one o'clock came all too soon. The last dance came then and everyone went home to get ready for the coming big day.

Awakened at Seven

Nobody minded being awakened at seven o'clock on Saturday morning, and such an awakening as it was! All the bells and whistles of the town must have been mingled in that clanging, banging, noisy period from seven until seven-fifteen.

Such a call to celebrate reminded many of that other early morning call when it was known that the armistice had actually come.

And the response, while not as spontaneous was just as enthusiastic. By nine o'clock most of the town was congregated at the square en route for their respective starting-points for marching.

Finest Parade Ever

Ralph O. Ingram, chairman of the Parade Committee, and his leaders and workers deserve the thanks of the whole town for the way in which that huge parade was carried on. Never was there such a parade. Never did any town pay a greater tribute to its heroes than did Andover citizens pay their war heroes by that long line of marchers who passed before the reviewing stand on Saturday morning.

The only sad part about the whole thing was the fact that so many persons were in it that the majority of the townspeople will never know what a marvelous spectacle they missed seeing. Over three thousand men, women and children marched in the five different divisions and it would be impossible to say which unit, which float was the most impressive.

The thoughtful planning and the original ability which was seen in so many of the sections bespoke time and energy. The float which paid honor to Andover's fourteen men who gave their lives was beautifully artistic and impressive. The Red Cross float with workers doing representative Red Cross work, and the Farmerettes who in picturesque garden costume carried their hoes and baskets of crops, lending a humorous touch by their signs such as, "At garden worm we did not squirm, when farming for our soldiers", were all special features in the First Division. In this division also was a group of young children called Little Patriots' Band, who have earned money to support a French orphan, and they with their collie dog made a unique picture.

Floats which were especially appropriate were the four that had been arranged by the Tyer Rubber Company. The "Lusitania, This Started It", and "The Peace Conference, This Ended It", were two. "The Little Mother" was done by the office girls.

Salvation Army doughnuts were put together and fried right on the South Church float, and a large supply was gratefully received by the boys.

The King's Daughters of the South Church had nearly four hundred cakes of sweet chocolate which they gave out to as many boys as they passed. Their float was a tableau in purple and white, representing their service rendered in bringing flowers, fruit and jellies to a wounded soldier.

A K. of C. hut was a feature of the St. Augustine's parish division, and their church made a large group in the parade.

Christ church paid honor to their heroes by having a seated figure, Freedom, bearing their service flag with its many stars. The figure was seated before a cross and the float was "The Altar of Freedom".

A feature that made a great hit with everybody was the Baby Carriage unit. Mothers of little babies pushed decorated carriages in which were seen smiling little faces. The banner at their head said, "We Said All Andover; This Proves It".

Such cheers as greeted the Mothers and Fathers of the men in service showed that their sacrifices were appreciated by their sons.

The Junior Red Cross of the public schools was represented by a group of thirty girls carrying a huge American flag, the biggest one in the parade.

Forty little children completely filled a big truck of Smith & Dove Mfg. Co., and the Ballardvale B.V.V.I.S. float was a lovely picture with a complete solid mass of goldenrod and asparagus fern.

Mr. Barnes of Lawrence who was with the "Y" in Italy and has been decorated, represented the Red Triangle on a "Y" float.

The Grange float with its much tempting garden produce showed that these people would not let their boys starve.

The marshal, M. M. Converse, and his aides, Hugh Bullock and 2nd Lieut. George Ingram, made a splendid appearance and marshalled the parade in perfect manner. It started promptly at 10.30 o'clock and was reviewed by the service men at just about 11.30.

Thanks to the efforts of Samuel Resnik, the whole parade was pictured by a motion picture film company, just as it passed the reviewing stand at Salem street. These pictures will all be shown at the Colonial theatre.

On this stand were many uniformed men and their applause showed that they appreciated the efforts of their home folk in that wonderful demonstration and tribute.

Colors Presented to the American Legion

At Brothers Field the divisions marched to places on the sides, leaving a large open space down which the service men passed in formal parade. And their reception was stupendous. Then came a feature of the occasion which will leave a deeper impression on those who were near enough to witness it than perhaps anything else that happened. This was the presentation of a glorious flag by E. Kendall Jenkins, commander of Post 99, G.A.R., to the new Post 8 of the American Legion. Captain Philip Thomson, commander of Post 8, received the colors.

Comrade Jenkins with his true soldierly bearing, presented with uncovered head the silken stars and stripes that blew very gently in the summer breeze. He spoke right from his heart to the boys who had taken part in this latest war, in comparison with which the Civil War was but child's play. The flag was dear to Post 99, but the members were proud and glad to transfer it to the boys of the American Legion.

Captain Thomson spoke as follows:—"Sir: For this flag, to you and all the members of the William F. Bartlett Post of the Grand Army of the Republic I present sincere and heartfelt thanks from all the members of the Andover Post of the American Legion.

"That our colors should have come to us from your hands is what every one of us would have desired. You have entrusted that flag to us. This great and generous celebration the town has given us. Perhaps the very best token of appreciation and thanks that we can give to all of you today is to say to everyone here that the American Legion throughout the length and breadth of this land has taken upon itself to guard that flag, even as you of the Grand Army of the Republic have guarded it.

CAPT. THOMSON - ANDOVER LEGION

"There will remain in my mind for a long time to come the picture of this great procession winding through the streets of this fair town of ours, and I know that in thinking of it afterwards there will always stand out in that picture a group of soldiers in blue, whom all of us thank again and again for preserving that flag for us, and whom we never forget."

What happened after that was certainly conducive toward bringing about a "closer fellowship and a sweeter spirit of kindness, one to another", as Chairman Cole had said the night before this Welcome Home was supposed to do. To eat with over five thousand persons, all feeling friendly, each to the other, on that huge Brothers Field, was an experience never to be forgotten. Groups of families and friends were scattered literally all over that big space of green grass, with sunshine and blue sky above. And yet there was plenty of room for thousands more. Everybody was happy. Everybody was glad to share with somebody else. Everybody spoke to everybody else. Everybody was host and hostess and there was such a feeling of good fellowship and joy as can seldom come to communities.

The multitude that gathered about the food centers quickly bought out the hundreds of sandwiches and doughnuts and cakes and pies at the King's Daughters' tables and at those supply centers of the various churches. The Refreshment Committee, with J. H. Campion as chairman, worked like dogs and served out their good things so fast that soon there was nothing left.

The women who worked so faithfully and hard at the tables representing the various churches were:

Baptist Church—Mrs. Albert W. Lowe, Mrs. George Dannels.

Christ Church—Mrs. M. E. Dalton, Mrs. T. E. Rhodes, Mrs. Roy W. Rhodes, and Miss Gladys Higgins.

Free Church—Food: Mrs. David S. Lindsay, Mrs. Agnes Dear, Mrs. Roy H. Bradford; soft drinks: Mrs. G. A. Christie, Miss Mary W. Scott.

South Church—Mrs. Horace Hale Smith, Mrs. G. M. R. Holmes, Miss C. Madeleine Hewes, Miss Louise Hardy.

GENERAL EDWARDS—GUEST OF ANDOVER

ceedingly popular.

When there was nothing more left to eat, people had a good time just sitting around looking at each other.

Sports Ran Like Clockwork

Music played on the grandstand, the announcer, P. J. Mahoney, went around calling for entries to the athletic contests, and before people knew it they were seeking viewpoints from which to witness the afternoon's sports.

William C. Crowley, the chairman, and his splendid, efficient committee, carried out the program like clockwork and there was not a dull moment for anybody.

On the football field was played off a soccer game by two picked teams. At the running track was a huge throng kept excited and eager over the outcome of the various events. The prizes which had been generously donated by many stores and townspeople were well worth winning, so that the entries were many and the spirit of competition splendid.

Probably the most thrilling event of the afternoon was the mile race, when John Koncho, the 13-year-old boy who came over from Lawrence, ran barefooted about that course like a regular old-timer at marathoning. His two opponents were far behind for most of the course, H. Hodge overtaking him the fourth time around and thereby gaining the first place. Koncho came in second, however, and the poor wornout, hot youngster was given a true hero's welcome. He was hoisted onto the shoulders of the cheering crowd and then borne to a place for rest. A purse was collected by one of the members of the band and presented to him at the end of the afternoon.

Biggest Crowd Ever at Game

The biggest crowd that ever came to witness a baseball game in Andover collected at the diamond at about four o'clock. Every seat on the grandstand was taken and many sat on steamer rugs and on the grassward all about the field.

The game was fast and kept up the interest of that great group of rooters. Tyler's team showed the result of practice and teamwork. The YD's were spectacular at times and need not be ashamed of the score, 6 to 2, in their loss. The lineup was as follows:—

Banquet for the Boys

After the game people were loath to leave that lovely spot and many hung around wishing they had brought their supper too.

Many gathered about the Borden gymnasium watching for the boys to come for the banquet and to catch a glimpse of the great General Edwards and our honored Governor Coolidge.

The governor arrived soon after six o'clock and the banquet began at 6:30. A substantial and deliciously cooked dinner was served to 350 service men and to the lucky four women, the Red Cross nurses.

Other invited guests were: Six members of Post 99, G.A.R., the clergymen and the selectmen of the town. Out-of-town guests were Governor Calvin Coolidge, Major General Edwards, Admiral Dunn, U.S.A., Brigadier General John H. Sherburne, Brigadier General Marlborough Churchill, Colonel Edward L. Logan, and Lieut. Colonel Frank S. Evans, C.B.E., D.S.O.

The service men assembled on Brothers Field were led by Lieut. T. J. O'Sullivan, Jr., to the gymnasium, accompanied by an admiring throng of friends and families.

The Banquet Committee had as its chairman Dr. Stearns, and his executives were V. D. Harrington, George A. Christie, and George Dick. Music was furnished by the Foss Military Band. Page of Lowell was the caterer and the menu was:

Hot Roast Sirloin of Beef, Brown Sauce
Mashed Potatoes Green Peas
Sliced Tomatoes Dressed Cucumbers
Rolls Butter
Banana Fritters, Lemon Sauce
Tuna Fish Salad, Mayonnaise
Assorted Ice Creams Assorted Cakes
Coffee

Rev. Frederick A. Wilson gave the invocation, and "America" was sung by everybody in that big hall.

To the boys who will not come back a silent toast was drunk and the company sang "The Vacant Chair."

Everett Collins sang "Little Mother of Mine," "Bob" Anderson of the Canadians sang two Lauder songs, and Francis Green sang a medley of old folk-songs.

One of the best features was the singing of popular and patriotic songs. These were led by John F. O'Connell, who put much spirit and "pep" into his leading that the result was inspiring.

Governor Coolidge Spoke

After the banquet the toastmaster, Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, introduced the speakers of the evening.

Governor Coolidge spoke of Massachusetts' record in all the wars of the country and said that the boys of this state had always been first to respond. They were first in the war for freedom, first in 1861 and Massachusetts boys were the first to go to France when the call came.

He said that this was a time for rejoicing and America could well be thankful that it was spared the great sacrifices and loss of life which had been the lot of the allies. Our loss was insignificant and although primarily the burden was heavy, America was well able to bear it.

He urged the boys to be watchful of those voices which threatened Americanism and advised them to refute and throw down any who spread a propaganda that would be detrimental to the country.

General Edwards' Address

General Edwards was given a great tribute when he arose to speak, by the whole gathering's singing of "Over There". The general was greatly pleased and stood at salute, with that well-known smile on his face. He spoke on the psychology of the American soldier and said he was unlike any other soldier in the world. It was possible to make a Yank out of a Greek or Jew or Syrian or a German had brought up in our institutions, although he had been unable to analyze the process. But a Yank could not be made into a Frenchman, although French generals had tried it. The Yankee soldier did things differently. He was a queer animal who refused to be driven but would go through hell with a smile on his lips for you if he was used right.

He advised a form of training or universal preparation for citizenship which would teach self-mastery, and proposed that the teachers be men who had served. Every man should join the Legion now, he said.

In conclusion he spoke of the local boys who had given their lives in the war, and of those who had been wounded. His tribute to the "fighting parson" of Andover, Captain Stackpole, was enthusiastically received by all the boys who knew how well-deserved it was.

Other Splendid Speeches

Lieut. Colonel Evans, who fought at Meuse with "The Contemptibles", responded to the toast of "Our English Allies". He said he would like to live in America and that he would decide on Andover as being a good place in which to make his home. He complimented our boys on the way in which they had responded and believed that America and Britain would act together in closer union and that the misunderstandings of the past are being cleared up.

The addresses by the remaining speakers were short but continued to renew the confidence held that Andover's part in the war set her firmly in line for an even larger part in the great need of peace times for high loyalty and large service.

Especially interesting were the addresses by Lieutenant Cronin for the Army and Lieutenant Moody for the Navy, and one could but wish that the big audience at the common might have heard these representatives of the men for whom the day had been planned, as they expressed the appreciation of all for the many evidences of Andover's loyalty to her sons in the service.

On the Common

In the meantime on the common interesting motion pictures were to be seen on a large screen erected for the occasion.

The pictures shown were amusing and highly entertaining. "Charlie" and "Doughy" always please everybody, big and small.

The people were all anxiously awaiting the arrival of General Edwards and they were rewarded at about nine o'clock by his appearance in the big official car.

Such applause as he received would make anybody's heart glad and the thousands of people in that brilliantly lighted park paid him a rousing tribute. He was introduced by Mr. Cole, who said that this man needed no introduction anywhere.

Andover Meets Andover

The cause of Andover's great demonstration on Friday, Saturday and Sunday of last week was the group of men and women who made up Andover's contribution to the world war, and a proper recognition of their service by the citizens at large. The effect of Andover's planning for that celebration was a union of all the factors of Andover life in a demonstration never before equalled, and probably never to be surpassed.

To greet the boys was the first thought in the minds of everybody who had a part in the affair. Of that every one was conscious, and following out that controlling force every one was determined to do his best in creating a friendly feeling in joining in a hearty and enthusiastic greeting. But in the greeting so much more than that was accomplished that without question Andover owes its service men and women a greater debt than it can even yet fully comprehend because of the influence they have had on the community through the "Welcome Home."

This was exactly what was designed in the character of the program that was arranged. If it were to be but a simple bestowal of medals, an ostentatious display by either the boys themselves in marching, or by the townspeople in showing forth the various organizations, small results could follow except the mere gratification that came from being a part of it all, and seeing the spectacular. Carrying all those who might be interested in both the cordial welcome and in the pageantry of the parade into such an atmosphere as that which was created on the Phillips campus, made the real opening for a get-together by Andover people; and how Andover people did avail themselves of that opening! The best estimates are that 7,000 out of the 8,000 people in the town were gathered on the campus for the greater part of the afternoon, beginning with community luncheon, in which almost the entire number took part; and closing with the ball game, which, although being the last feature, still held the interest of almost all. It was a wonderful afternoon crowning a wonderful full day's program.

The story of the events is told in complete detail elsewhere and yet this column cannot refrain from reviewing it a bit in order that proper recognition may be given to the forces that combined to do this wonderful thing for the Andover people.

The Friday evening reception was almost exactly a counterpart of the reception held in March, and yet differed by the picturesqueness of the gathering held on the Common under influences unique and wonderful. The grandstand was there, changed by decorations and a canvas background, into an almost perfect speaking rostrum, while the audience played in front of the speakers under a system of lighting that transformed the whole atmosphere into one of the most remarkably appealing influences that ever greeted a public speaker. The audience itself felt this influence, and responded in a way to bring rare satisfaction to those who took part in this first event of the program. The disappointment over the failure of General Edwards to come to this particular function was greatly lessened by the satisfaction that came to Andover people in having the opportunity to greet Col. Logan, to hear his fine address, and to get in touch with the war through his vision.

Adjoining from the Common to the Town House and the other halls made available for reception and dancing, at least 3,000 people took part in these features. That the halls were crowded may have made it a little more uncomfortable for those who had no thought of anything but the technique of dancing, but if so, it also made it more homey and more enjoyable from the standpoint of those who wanted to be in the atmosphere of bumping together, with all that signifies in the creation of a community interest.

The parade on Saturday will probably stand for all time as the greatest exhibition of Andover interest that has ever been marshalled in this way. Color everywhere, skill and ingenuity in the many floats, a spirit of happy, joyous satisfaction permeating all who took part marching through long lanes of brilliant decoration and cheering people.

This was a feature never to be forgotten by those who had a part in it, or who for some reason were obliged to look upon it to enjoy it. Skillfully planned, its clock-like movement and almost perfect conformation to schedule, showed how efficient had been its committee of arrangements, and how hearty had been the support of all those in it. The prettiest touch of the day in connection with the parade came at the dismissal of the boys in the presentation of a stand of colors by the veterans of '61. Nearly sixty years separated the two generations represented in this pretty bit, but nothing separated the old and new veterans or the people who were joined by them through this exercise, in the spirit of loyalty to country, devotion to service and respect for law and order which was emphasized in the incident.

The picnic is beyond description, because the great underlying and controlling force back of it and permeating it the entire afternoon cannot be analyzed. While preparations had been made for a generous supply of the different kinds of refreshments which the committee had provided, it seemed almost no time before the call by the big gathering had exhausted the supplies, and this notwithstanding the fact that probably three-fourths of the people brought their own luncheons; but everybody was happy, no complaints were filed, and as far as possible the stores were replenished from time to time; and whether they were or not, Andover on a picnic was just as happy without as with. Here again the program of the afternoon showed splendid planning, and remarkable execution, and not a halt in the sports was noted from the beginning to the end. Event followed event until the setting sun indicated that Andover's great day was nearly over.

The banquet in the evening for the boys themselves was the principal complimentary feature to those who had been in the service. The presence of Governor Coolidge and General Edwards gave the touch of official endorsement, as all that was needed to place that sort of stamp upon the entire program. Their speeches, like the others, lifted higher the sentiments of those who heard them, and fixed more securely the purposes of all Andover's soldiers and sailors in meeting the responsibilities ahead. While the banquet was going on for the boys, the closing program of the evening for the townspeople was underway, again on the Common. Here, unexpectedly to most of the townspeople, General Edwards made his second speech, delighting at least 4,000 people with a brief address full of his own personality and giving the public a closer insight into the leadership upon which many Andover boys had been dependent in the past few years.

This brief estimate of Andover's wonderful celebration would be most incomplete if it should fail to put into type where it could be preserved for all time a recognition of the generous and hearty co-operation extended by many forces in working out the successful program. What a lot Andover owes to such institutions as the lighting company who so generously took care of the wonderfully successful lighting of the Common for both evenings; to Phillips Academy as an institution; to Treasurer Sawyer and Principal Stearns as representatives of that institution; to superintendent Harrington; foreman Smith and men under them, who without a thought of anything but having the Phillips fields in perfect condition gave freely of resources, of labor and of enthusiastic interest to see that the town not only had the best that Phillips could give, but probably the best that any town in the State could possibly have for such an affair. How many knew that practically all of the trucks that made possible that splendid exhibition of floats were donated by the mills of Andover and Lawrence without charge? How many knew that the stand on which the boys were gathered, the trucks driven by local expression, that carried chairs, and a lot of all those things represented an enthusiastic and hearty response by the various parties, responding in the spirit of giving anything they possibly could to make the affair a full success?

To the committee members themselves the townspeople are under great obligation, and particularly so to the committee which under the leadership of Ralph O. Ingram made the parade the memorable event that it was. High appreciation is also due to the committee under William C. Crowley whose responsibility for the sports was so wonderfully discharged; to the committee on refreshments under J. H. Campion, where with a task that was not easily outlined because of the many uncertainties surrounding it, an enviable record was made; to the music committee under Major Holt; to the dance committee under secretary Angus; to the banquet committee under the direction of Henry A. Bodwell; all along the line, without a single exception, each contributed line leadership, supported by genuine, hearty and enthusiastic labor by those associated with them.

May the memory of Andover's big day in which the town renewed its community spirit hold every citizen nearer to his responsibility for the preservation of those ideals upon which the New England town has been developed.

Notice

Tomorrow the remainder of the sports from the Welcome Home Day program will be held and prizes awarded to the winners. The sports are all for the service men and include relay race, army vs. navy; and running bases; throwing baseball and dressing race. The races will be held on the playstead at 2 p. m.

The prize for the relay race is $15.00 donated by Rep. James W. Robertson of this district. It is expected that a baseball game can be arranged with Tyr and an outside team.

WEDDINGS

GATES—HADLEY

Miss Irene Belle Hadley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Hadley, of 33 Saunders street, North Andover, and Harold Steward Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lincoln Gates of 47 Whittier street, Andover, were united in marriage Wednesday evening in the St. Paul's Episcopal church.

A large assemblage witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Rev. H. Usher Monro, the rector, at seven o'clock, the double ring service being used.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered for a recessional. The selections were rendered by the organist of the church, Miss Edith G. Knowles.

The young couple, who are highly esteemed, were attended by Miss Muriel Warwick of North Andover and Arthur W. Cole of Andover. The bride was elegantly gowned in white georgette crepe, with tulle veil, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid wore a very attractive costume of pink georgette crepe. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The church was beautifully decorated with hydrangeas, dahlias, asters and ox-eyed daisies, by the Girls' Friendly Society of which the bride is a member.

The ushers were Howard L. Gates, a brother of the groom, Carl N. Lindsay and Alfred H. McKee, all of Andover. Following the marriage there was an enjoyable reception at the bride's home, from 7.30 to 9.00 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Gates were heartily congratulated and wished a long life replete with happiness and success. Caterer A. P. Weigel of Lawrence served a choice wedding repast.

About sixty guests were present, including relatives and intimate friends of the newly married couple.

They were from West Newbury, Lawrence, West Somerville, Andover, North Andover, and other places.

Mr. and Mrs. Gates received many costly and elegant presents. The groom is gardener at Mr. Wood's beautiful estate, in Andover. Mr. and Mrs. Gates left for a wedding trip amid a shower of confetti and rice. Returning, they are to reside in a new and nicely furnished home on Haverhill street, Frye Village, and will be at home after October first. The bride's going away costume was of dark blue serge with hat to match.

MILLER—KYDD

Miss Jessie M. Kydd, daughter of the late Thomas Kydd, and Joseph A. Miller of Andover, were united in marriage Monday, September 8th, at seven o'clock, by Rev. Nathaniel W. Matthews at his residence, 15 Ellsworth street, Lowell. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of flesh-colored georgette and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by Mrs. Betty E. French as matron of honor, who carried pink roses. George O. E. French was best man. Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George O. E. French, 1018 Middlesex street, which was attended by many relatives and friends of the couple from Lowell, Lawrence, Andover and Boston. A delightful supper was served by the D. L. Page Company, and after a couple of hours with their friends, they left on an extended wedding trip through Maine, the best wishes of their many friends following them. They will be at home after November first at their new home in Andover.

WHIPPLE—WAKEFIELD

Miss Dorothy E. Wakefield, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Wakefield of Maple avenue, was married to Melville C. Whipple on Wednesday evening at 6.00 p. m. at the home of her parents.

The bride wore a gown of embroidered georgette and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Isabella Bodwell of Watertown, and Olive C. Warden of Andover, two small nieces of the bride, were flower girls, carrying bouquets of pink asters and were the brides only attendants.

Rev. C. W. Henry performed the ceremony using the double ring service. Mrs. Horace C. Bodwell, sister of the bride, played the wedding march.

Miss Alice Hinton of Andover served the wedding lunch. Miss Wakefield is a graduate of Simmons college and has been engaged in secretarial work at Harvard University. Mr. Whipple has recently returned from overseas where he served as captain in the sanitary corps and will resume his duties as instructor in the Harvard engineering school this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Whipple will be at home November first at 1572 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

Interesting Exhibit at North Andover

The North Andover Historical Society are holding an exhibition in their exhibition rooms, on Academy road, North Andover of china, glass, and pewter. Those interested in old china, glass and pewter will find here some very interesting and beautiful pieces. It will be open to the public Friday and Saturday afternoons from two to four and in the evenings from seven to nine. It will be free to members of the society, but others will be charged ten cents admission.

Private James Coates has recently returned from overseas, arriving in New York last week. He is now at Camp Mills awaiting his discharge.

The lights on the bandstand made the faces of each person easily distinguishable and throughout the whole address practically every one of that big audience never took his eyes from the face of the speaker.

General Edwards reviewed the work accomplished by Yankees in the Great War, showing how when once the true Yankee spirit has been perceived there is nothing but admiration given it. He spoke of Southerners and men from other parts of the country who were proud and pleased to be fighting with them and called themselves "Yanks."

The American always wants to know the reason why he is to do a certain thing. Tell him that, clap him on the shoulder, and there is nothing he will not do. "Play fair" is the way to keep the respect of an American.

He said he was glad to be in this town and see with his own eyes the way in which the returned boys have been appreciated by their fellow-citizens.

End of a Perfect Day

His exit from the stand to his car was slow and blocked by those who wished to shake this great man's hand and to have a near view of the Yankee leader. They cheered and crowded about his car and there could be no doubt in the mind of General Edwards that all Andover was glad to have him here.

Lights went out and the pictures continued on the big white screen until after ten o'clock.

Then came the realization that this greatest day in the history of Andover was nearly over.

Dancing in the Knights of Columbus hall was enjoyed by several of those who still had some energy left.

The majority of people, however, went to their homes and there is no doubt but what they slept the sleep of the happily wearied.

Sunday's Thanksgiving Services

Sunday dawned warm and bright with September sunshine, and the churches were well filled at their 10.30 o'clock services. All congregations were glad to show their thankful hearts that peace is in the world and that Andover's boys have returned home again.

Special music, patriotic and full of thanks and praise to God, was a feature of all the services, and the various ministers preached splendid sermons.

Abstracts from them are given below.

Mr. Bigelow at South Church

The chief accomplishment of our armies and allies was to stop the tidal wave of barbaric tyranny that threatened to inundate Europe and to sweep with destruction the shores of America. But there were also many fruits of a secondary sort such as hurling kings from thrones, establishing new nations, suppressing the use of intoxicants, and breaking up social classes.

Perhaps the most profound disturbance of all has been the unsettlement of industries. The industrial ferment in Russia has been the most conspicuous and frightful; where a new tyranny on the part of labor unions has destroyed multitudes of most useful people and has violated the sacred rights of individual humanity that had been gained through countless generations of suffering. In England, somewhat less startling, the industrial churning has turned up unionized labor as partner in the government of Great Britain. In America, where labor forces are less strongly unionized, there is a turbulence and unrest that seem to threaten the stability of even this unshakable democracy; while everywhere in the world high prices and aggressive demands of toilers have set us all into confusion.

The connection of all this with the great war is easily seen, because our governments in their dire needs offered for labor of any kind such fabulous prices to encourage the utmost of day work and night work to win the war. These high wages were a dizzy revelation of the value of manual toil that is not easily forgotten, and the influence of it has spread like an epidemic everywhere, making profiteers of nearly all persons who have labor or the fruit of labor to sell.

Besides this individual inflation of labor there is the vastly increased power of unionism. Ever since the President granted the demands of the Railroad Brotherhood a constant stream of concessions has extended the influence and authority of labor unions until they seem to be almost dictators to courts and legislatures.

The outcome of these movements in the industrial world has been a sort of dilemma of trouble; on the one hand the high cost of living makes a wage-earner fear lest all his efforts may be in vain, and on the other hand a certain terror is felt lest a huge calamity may stop the course of production; for, when all kinds of laborers keep raising their demands upon other laborers for bigger pay, there is sure to come a breaking point and a collapse of it all. But there is a consoling bit of scripture which we may use to reassure ourselves in this day as appropriately as in the day when it was written by the prophet Isaiah twenty-five centuries ago. He said of the returning exiles of the Jews, "They shall not labor in vain, neither shall they bring forth for calamity."

The messianic assurance to us Americans in this day is that labor shall not be in vain but shall receive an increasing reward, while it is guaranteed on the other hand not to come to the folly of a calamity like Bolshevism or a chaos of industrial warfare.

The industrial fruits of the great war are: First, the enhancement of the value of manual toil, making idleness more disgraceful and removing much of the scorn formerly felt against unskilled labor. Increased wages are the financial expression of this universal esteem. Second, the wages earned should be supplemented by a share also of the profits when they amount to more than a fair interest upon the capital invested. The system of the stock ownership of the workers in the United States Steel Corporation makes over seventy per cent of the steel workers sharers in the profits of that great industry. So also with the Ford Automobile Company, with Hart Shafner and Marx, clothing makers, and with many smaller concerns. Third, that organized labor should and must participate in management or in establishing the conditions of industry. The War Labor Board during the last two years is one expression of industrial democracy. This does not mean that a machinist who runs a turning lathe should determine the manufacturing policy of the head office; but he should be represented in deciding wages and hours and conditions of toil and in many other concerns that vitally interest him and that he knows by immediate contact better than the office management.

In all the fruits of the war there is a clear increase of the cooperative element between capital and labor, and they mark the decadence of the false ambitions of labor unions to refrain from all sorts of cooperative overtures so as to maintain a fighting position, always prepared to strike against capital. But the true aim is towards peace and harmony, for "they shall not labor in vain, neither shall they bring forth for calamity."

Mr. Wilson at Free Church

A large audience gathered in the Free Church for the "Welcome Home" service of Sunday morning.

The returned soldiers and sailors found a "Welcome Home" with the country's flag and the service flag suspended from the pillars of the church porch to greet their eyes as they approached its doors. The audience room was elaborately decorated with oak leaves and autumn flowers; a large flag draped the pulpit and surrounded the Honor Roll.

Many war service men in uniform sat in the front pews and others were scattered through the audience.

James R. Carter of High Plain road is visiting relatives in Pembroke and Dennysville, Maine.

Pomona Grange will meet with West Boxford Grange on October 2nd. This is the first fall meeting.

Mrs. Ida F. Shaw is in Greenwood visiting Mrs. Mary Wray who expects to leave for the west very soon.

Louise and Melville Foster have returned to Melrose after a pleasant vacation spent with Mrs. Geo. M. Carter.

Mrs. Francis Schneider has just returned to her camp, "Bid-a-Wee" at Haggatt's, after a visit in Portland, Maine.

Among the home-comers for the past week are Granville K. Cutler's family, who have been spending the summer at their cottage at Seabrook.

Because of sickness the state officer who was to be with Andover Grange on Tuesday evening, was not there. The regular business of the evening was conducted in the usual way and then Miss Lucy Abbott, who has lately returned from service overseas as a nurse, favored those present with a vivid, interesting word-picture of her experiences. She showed some very interesting souvenirs. The next meeting of the Grange will be a musical evening with the master, William J. Trauschke in charge.

Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw went to Sagamore beach Wednesday, to be gone over Sunday.

Mrs. Everett March of Dedham has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lizzie S. Barnes, Andover St.

The B. V. V. I. Society will hold a dance in the Community Room Saturday evening. A good attendance is assured.

The first meeting of the season of the Bradlee Mothers' Club was held Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance.

During the severe thunder storm on Monday evening the house of Mrs. Margaret Herrick, Tewksbury St., was struck and caused much excitement but the damage was slight. It was the fiercest thunder storm in this vicinity for a long time.

Miss Pearl M. Comstock who is a graduate of the Bridgewater Normal School succeeds Miss Briggs. This is the only change in the corps of teachers of the school. The local school starts off the year with a good attendance and every thing points to a very successful year.

There was a good attendance at the "Special Welcome Home" services at the Congregational church Sunday forenoon. Clarence C. Hamilton of Boston gave a very appropriate address for the occasion, relating several of his experiences during his six months Y. M. C. A. work in France.

Rev. Augustus H. Fuller spent Sunday at his home. Mrs. Fuller is doing as well as can be expected at the Harbor View hospital, Salem. It is hoped she will be able to return home before long. Mr. Fuller returned to Beverly Thursday so to be near his wife while she is slowly recovering from her severe illness.

Christian Endeavor Honors Soldiers

The Congregational Church Vestry was filled to overflowing Sunday evening when the local C. E. Society had their "Welcome Home" to their returned soldiers.

Two of their former members, Lewis Mears and Frank Petty, gave very interesting accounts of their experiences while in the service.

Lewis Mears had the distinction of being the only soldier from Andover who was taken prisoner and held several months in a German prison until the armistice was declared. Lewis gave a detailed account of his life in the army and told a number of his personal experiences including his capture by the Germans.

Frank Petty who was in the Aviation Corps told about spending three months in Texas and then being transferred to England where in his training he witnessed many accidents some of them fatal which occurred at his camp. He was transferred to France where he was placed in one of the largest camps over there but just as he was about to be sent on the battle lines the armistice was declared. He related many interesting personal incidents of life at the Aviation camps which in many respects is the most dangerous branch of the service. It was the most interesting patriotic service ever held in the local church.

ABBOTT VILLAGE

Miss Zena McNab of Red Spring road spent Sunday with friends in Boston.

Mrs. James Cairnie of Red Spring road, visited friends in Boston at the week-end.

Oscar Anderson of the Smith and Dove office, is enjoying his annual vacation at Salisbury beach.

Miss Annie Ness has returned to her home on Red Spring road, after spending the summer at Marblehead.

Corporal Robert Black of Foxhills Station Island medical hospital, spent a few days at the home of his parents on Brechin Terrace.

Mr. and Mrs. John Black of Beverly, spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. Black's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Nicoll of Shawshaven road.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tighe and daughter, Rita, have returned to their home in Boston after spending a week at the home of Thomas Dudley on Essex street.

Some Potato Crop

Abbott Village has some clever and successful gardeners but none excel Stewart Fraser of Shawshaven road. For many years his flower garden has been about as attractive as any and he has also captured cups and prizes at flower shows.

He now excels in raising vegetables and has a record potato crop which will be hard to beat. From a single "Murphy" of special Maine grade which he received from a friend, he has raised twenty-one potatoes weighing 134 pounds. The potatoes were grown in the Smith and Dove tenement gardens and Stewart is waiting for reports from other vegetable gardeners.

Hacklers Winners

The hacklers of the Smith and Dove bowling team easily defeated the Repair Shop by taking all points in a game on the Hillside Alleys. Those who excelled for the winning team were J. Deymond and J. Looney and Frank Jamieson for the losers. The scores:

Hacklers—S. Fraser: 248, F. Connolly: 259, H. Craig: 250, J. Looney: 280, J. Deymond: 285. Totals 1322.
Repair Shop—J. Campbell: 241, A. Anderson: 256, L. Coates: 212, F. Jamieson: 266, Joe Connolly: 246. Totals 1218.

Violin Lessons

If you are interested in having your child learn to play the violin, now is the time to look up a competent teacher. Joseph Emile Daudelin, former pupil of the famous Paris Conservatoire, who has had classes at the Briggs-Allen School for several years, on Saturdays, may be consulted at Steinert Hall, Boston, or later at the Briggs-Allen School.

ANDOVER'S CELEBRATION

Four of them acted as ushers, two—Robert V. Deymond and Frederick C. Wilson, in army dress, and two—Norman E. Harris and Harry A. Rodger, in navy uniform.

Several patriotic hymns were included in the programme which were sung inspiringly. The junior choir sang Kreuser's Hymn of Praise, and the senior choir rendered Kipling's "Tost We Forget," with fine effect.

One of the most interesting features of the service was the roll-call of the ninety-five names on the church's war honor list, to which each person responded by rising as his or her name was read.

The pastor addressed his message particularly to these guests of the day, using for his text Paul's words found in first Thess. 2: 19 (Weymouth's translation). "What is our hope or joy or the crown of which we boast? Is it not you yourselves."

He spoke in part as follows. After alluding to the appropriateness of the Church service as a fitting close to the great celebration he said:

"The words of the text express the feelings in our hearts to-day for you men and women as you return to us from your loyal service in home camp, or on the sea or in foreign lands. You are our joy, our crown of boasting, our hope."

"You are our joy. We rejoice in the relief from anxiety and care which your home-coming brings to us. We rejoice in our reunited families and in resumed companionship and home service. We rejoice too, in what you and your associates of the allied forces have accomplished."

"You have delivered Belgium from the crushing thralldom of the Germans, and restored its independent sovereignty. You have stayed the invading Huns in their devastation of the fair fields and homes of France and driven them across the Rhine. You have scattered the vengeful thunder cloud which threatened England's freedom and safety."

"You have broken the power of autocracy and opened the way for the heaven of true democracy to work in the nations of the earth. You have maintained the ideal that right makes might."

"In this epoch-making war you have done a glorious work and we exult in it."

"You are also our crown of boasting. As the Roman mother of old called her sons her jewels, we take pride in you as jewels in the crown of our nation's glory. We are proud of the spirit which you have developed and manifested."

"You went from us as boys inexperienced in war, untried in arms, untrained to meet the hardships and dangers of such service.

"You come back to us as men, with firmly-knit muscles, strong to endure, brave in danger, devoted to service. You have learned obedience to law. You have learned to make duty supreme."

"During the first gas attack at Ypres, the whole civil population was in a panic, fleeing from the city. At one specially exposed corner the shells were raining. Yet at that very corner, immovable and unperturbed stood a sentry from the sixteenth Canadian Scottish battalion. While earth and sky seemed crashing about him, duty with him was supreme."

"You have learned also, the privilege of service and of self-sacrifice and to recognize the rights of your fellow men. In the army one must not be thinking about his rights; he must be concerned about his duty."

"A man from southeastern Europe in a New York hotel was heard loudly protesting against the government requiring him to register. 'It is an infringement of our rights,' he exclaimed. 'Some one answered him. 'While your country's rights are at stake your rights are in abeyance. The country's rights must be assured or there can be no such thing as rights for the individual.'"

"You have recognized your nation's rights as of first importance and we glory in your spirit."

"And you are our hope. The community, the church, the commonwealth, the nation, look to you for help in meeting the dangers and duties and problems of peace. It is for each one of you to say:

"Freedom hath yet a work for me to do. I speak that inward voice which never yet spoke falsely, when it urged the spirit on To noble deeds for country and mankind."

"There are problems of peace awaiting us no less difficult and important than the problems of war."

"The race problem is one of them. The Civil War and the Fifteenth Amendment of the nation's Constitution have not settled it."

"The last few weeks, with their race riots in several widely separated parts of our country, show that it is still a burning question. One great help to its solution lies in the practice of that democratic spirit—that spirit of comradeship which you boys have practised in your war service."

"You learned to measure men's worth, not by color, or race, or wealth, or education, but by manhood and service. Northerners and Southerners, whites and blacks, Scotchmen and Englishmen, Yankees and Italians, Jews and Greeks, all races of men in the allied armies learned to eat and sleep and march and fight and die together held by the tie of a common cause to which they were devoted."

"As your friend and pastor let me urge you to cultivate and to give expression to these life-blessing convictions now that you have returned to your homes and to use your influence to strengthen them in others."

"The church needs your service. The church is 'three pillar and ground of the truth.'"

"It is the mother of all the great philanthropies, the great reforms, the great organizations for helping humanity, and it is the inspirer of the high ideals for which the allies have fought the war. The kingdom of God for which the church stands, includes all these agencies for blessing our world and is greater than them all."

"You have served and sacrificed for the high ideals of democracy; will you serve and sacrifice for the Kingdom of God out of which Christian democracy springs? I urge you to make your strong, self-controlled, high-minded, unselfish lives tell in the days to come for the church and for the Christian religion. Take your stand openly and serve faithfully for genuine Christian principles; enlist under the banner of Jesus Christ and following His guidance to make our homes and community, our commonwealth and nation, happier, safer, holier. In such blessed work we look to you in hope."

At the Baptist Church

The theme of the morning sermon was "Welcome Home: and the Home Spirit" and in opening, allusion was made to that abiding sentiment in the immortal hymn "Home, Sweet Home."

"This celebration properly concludes with a religious service of joy and thanksgiving to Almighty God for his loving kindness and tender mercies."

"First of all let us pay loving tribute and deep honor to the boys who do not come home—those boys who have paid the 'last full measure of devotion' to high ideals, and whose blood is purchasing a world-needed Peace."

"What deep feelings must have stirred the souls of the boys 'over there' as they turned homeward, and began the journey toward 'My country and my home.' And with what watching eyes and waiting hearts the home folks awaited their coming."

"The Church has a true welcome home for all who are for a time away, for the church among other things is in the truest sense a home. It sent you away with her blessing, it followed you with her prayers, it sustained you with her sympathy, it welcomes you with loving heart and open arms."

"A home is neither hot nor palace, poverty or luxury, but it is essentially an atmosphere—an atmosphere of sympathy, kindness, love, helpfulness. To such we welcome you, and to enlarge such we ask you to contribute."

"The brief sermon concluded with the following lines written by the pastor for the occasion."

Now the victory's won and the shouting is done.

And the boys are home at last;

And the shrieking shell and the fierce battle's hell

And the machine gun's rattle is past.

We've sung "Welcome Home" for the boys who have come

From the camps and from over the sea;

And we surely are glad to welcome each lad

To the place where he used to be.

And the dear babies too, with their service so true,

Our welcome is theirs without loss;

And we honor the name with undying fame—

But on Flanders grim field on his honor-torn shield,

Many beds sleep the sleep of the brave;

And many heart-throbbes stifled with sobs,

As we think of the German-made graves.

But they died not in vain such a victory to gain;

Generations their debtors will be;

We bequeath them to France where they had their great chance

To help make the world's nations free.

'Tis a true welcome home that we give to each one,

Of America's sons we are proud;

And the years will not cease to honor the Peace

Which your victories o'er areas have endowed.

Our Flag you unfurled to the end of the world,

The Stars and Stripes takes the first place:

Democracy, Justice and Law, arch-fiends overawe,

And America leads all—the race.

So welcome you here—'tis a toast of good cheer,

And now you are here—well, boys, what then?

Just get in your place—buckle down to life's race,

And boys—OUR BOYS—just be MEN!

Obituary

MRS. HELEN MILTON RIDDOCH

Many homes and hearts in Andover are saddened by the death of Mrs. Helen Milton Riddoch which occurred at the Barr sanatorium in Methuen early Saturday morning, September 6th. For more than two years she had suffered from a subtle disease which all possible means were used to conquer, and which she bore with remarkable patience, fortitude and Christian hope.

She was born in Banochry, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in 1853 and was the daughter of Joseph and Helen Milton, both of whom are remembered by some of our oldest residents.

Twice married and widowed in Scotland, she came to this country in 1888 with her young family of six children, all of whom lived to survive her and to attend her funeral service. They are Alexander Ritchie of Lawrence, Bruce Ritchie and Mrs. Margaret Ritchie Chapman of Mansfield, Mrs. Jean Ritchie Donald (wife of William G. Donald), Mrs. Helen Ritchie Jackson (wife of Arthur R. Jackson), and Charles M. Riddoch of Andover.

She leaves also, nine grandchildren; one great-grandchild and three brothers, George Milton of Newburyport, Mansfield Milton of Youngstown, Ohio, and Joseph Milton of Tacoma, Washington.

During all of the thirty-one years of her residence in Andover, Mrs. Riddoch was identified with the Free church and was one of the most efficient and valued workers in its ladies' societies. Her cheerfulness, her ever helpful spirit, her skill with the needle and her good judgment will long be missed by her friends.

Her early days in this adopted country were attended by hardship and perplexing problems, but she met them with victorious courage, perseverance and wise thrift and she lived to enjoy comfort and ease in the homes of her children.

In neighborhood life she was a good Samaritan and many will gratefully remember the help of her sympathy, skill and tender ministry to them in times of sickness, sorrow and want. She looked well to the ways of her household, she stretched forth her hands to the needy and in her tongue was the law of kindness. "Give her of the fruit of her hands and let her own works praise her in the gates."

The funeral service was held in the home of her daughter, Mrs. William G. Donald on Wolcott avenue, last Tuesday afternoon and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. F. A. Wilson of the Free church. Masses of beautiful flowers testified to the sympathy of friends. The burial was in the South cemetery and the bearers were Arthur R. Jackson, William G. Donald, Norman F. Chapman and H. B. Wood.

Andover, Massachusetts

One who was fortunate overheard the following conversation between General Edwards and several Andover soldiers in the gymnasium after he had spoken there. It was repeated to the Townswoman and she passes it on. The general was on his way out and had been talking to Commander Jenkins when he suddenly turned to a group of boys and said:

"How about it? Got any slackers here?"

"I don't know. A few, I suppose," was the reply.

"Got any who aren't joining up with the Legion of Honor?"

"Yes, some."

"Well," said the general, "I tell you what you do. Put their names down in a little book. Keep a list of those that don't want to come in on a fine thing, then five years from now take it out and see if it isn't those boys who are waiting to run the whole post. You'll know what to do about letting them, because you'll have their names there in black and white!"

One of the most picturesque bits of the wonderful day was the group of little children standing on the lawn in front of the parochial school. They were too small to march but they were present in their little white dresses and smiling faces and it was a pleasure to pass them.

There are so many persons who worked hard to make that biggest event big that it would be decidedly difficult to mention any names. The list would be so long that it would be decidedly difficult to mention any names. The list would be so long that space in one week's paper would not permit!

Persons who hadn't known or seen each other for years shook hands and smiled in sincere friendly fashion in that big green Brothers Field.

The Mothers and Fathers of Service Men received the greatest applause from the reviewing stand and it is any wonder? Didn't they deserve it?

Did you happen to go to the drinking fountain and get a good laugh? The water bubbled up in a most unexpected manner. The result was a shower-bath for many and all kinds of amusement.

Will you ever forget the lights shining on green leaves, throwing shadows on smooth green grass and making the world seem bright as day? Many lighted up eager, intelligent faces of attentively listening men and women and children who would not for worlds miss a word of the great general's address.

We, with all our local celebrating, must not forget that General Pershing came to this country on Monday. No greater home-coming was ever given to a hero than the one he received from all New York City as he stood on the bridge of the huge Leviathan.

Four stars he has and also the honor of having been commander of the greatest host of soldiers ever gathered together to fight under the glorious Stars and Stripes.

The Townswoman

All members of the Christian Endeavor society of the South church are asked to be present at the opening meeting of the year, Sunday evening at 6.30. There will be a business meeting at the close of the service, at which all chairmen are asked to be present.

If all goes well, Miss Amy Burrill celebrates her ninetieth birthday, September 12, 1919. Being the day of the Townsman issue, perhaps it will not be too late for some readers to send a card or a posy for our venerable friend.

Sunday Services

The usual services will be held at the local churches Sunday morning at 10.30. Communion will be observed at the South, Free and West churches, with reception of new members at the Free church.

The South church Sunday School resumes its sessions at 12.00 o'clock, and the Christian Endeavor society starts its full meetings at 6.30. On Tuesday at 6.30 p.m. the King's Daughters meeting will be held at Rabbits Pond.

An important meeting of the Free church parish will be held at 7.4 Monday evening to act upon the resignation of the pastor.

The Further Lights Society of the Baptist church will hold their first autumn meeting in the vestry, Monday evening at 7.45 o'clock.

The order of service at Christ church will be as follows:

Prelude in D flat Guilmant

Processional Hymn 418 Croft

Venite Te Deum in F Simper

Benedictus Hymn 649 Weber

Offertory, "Cast Thy Burden on the Lord" Mendelssohn

Recessional Hymn 414 Dykes

Postlude in C Vierling

The church school will reopen on September 21st.

WHY REYNOLDS SHINGLES ARE THE BEST:

Reynolds shingles were the first asphalt shingles made.

They have had more years actual roof-test service than any other asphalt shingle.

They have been on roofs for eighteen years and are still found to be in good condition.

They are surfaced with granulated rock, slate, etc., and the natural colors are retained—reds, greens and gray—non-fading, beautiful.

Reynolds shingles are guaranteed—They will not split, rust, curl, leak nor blow off.

Economical to buy, economical to lay, no repairs or painting required.

Reynolds shingles possess the three cardinal shingle virtues—Beauty, Durability and Economy.

The mineral surfacing acts as a fire-preventive, making an insulation against flying sparks and brands. These shingles have been tested in the insurance underwriters laboratories and have been officially approved as fire-retardants.

Do not be misled into thinking all Asphalt shingles are alike—They are not. There are many grades of Asphalt shingles as there are names. Reynolds shingles are the improved, approved, and proven best to use.
